HARBOR ASSET MANAGEMENT

January 20, 2026

Dear Partners,

Harbor Credit Opportunities Fund returned 1.70% net in the fourth quarter of 2025, bringing full-year performance to 7.9% net. Returns were driven by carry in our senior secured loan book and by two restructurings that closed ahead of schedule.

Period	Net return
October 2025	0.58%
November 2025	0.62%
December 2025	0.49%
Q4 2025	1.70%

Positioning. Portfolio duration remains short at roughly 1.3 years, as most of the book is floating rate. We see limited exposure to a further move in long-end yields, though slower rate cuts would keep coupon income elevated. Default rates in our universe ticked up to 3.1%, and we have been avoiding cov-lite deals in software and healthcare services.

Outlook. We expect 2026 to offer better entry points in stressed credit as maturity walls approach. Dry powder stands at 14% of NAV.

Fund AUM at quarter end was $905 million. Liquidity: quarterly redemptions with 90 days' notice.

Sincerely,
Dana Whitlock
Chief Investment Officer

Portfolio Manager Commentary

January gains came primarily from short-term reversal signals in US large caps. As dispersion compressed in the final week, we reduced gross exposure from 3.1x to 2.6x. Factor exposures remained tightly controlled; net beta to the S&P 500 averaged 0.02.

Risk metrics: annualized volatility since inception 7.6%; correlation to MSCI World 0.04.

Portfolio Manager Commentary

February was a difficult month for the fund. A sharp momentum unwind mid-month hurt our medium-horizon signals, and we did not fully offset the move with our short-term book. We kept gross exposure near 2.6x and see no structural change in signal efficacy.

Risk metrics: annualized volatility since inception 7.6%; correlation to MSCI World 0.04.

Manager Comments. Rates were volatile into the January FOMC. Our main loss came from a 2s10s flattener that moved against us as the long end sold off. We reduced duration from 3.4 to 2.1 years ahead of the March meeting and remain cautious on term premium. Liquidity in our core cash-futures basis positions remains good, and margin usage is 38% of available.

Manager Comments. February returns came from swap spread and basis trades. Portfolio rate sensitivity remains low; a 25bp parallel move in Treasuries would move NAV by roughly 0.5%. The fund benefited from long positions in front-end US rates as markets priced additional cuts, and from a short JPY position into the BoJ meeting. Equity index hedges were a small drag.
